Dear Dr. Henney:

This is to urge that you severely limit the use in animal feed of all antibiotics used in human medicine. I am sure that this will enrage the agribusiness and pharmaceutical interests. However, use of these drugs is leading to increasing bacterial resistance to antibiotics - which is a major public health risk. It is just not worth it.

Both the Center for Disease Control and the World Health Organization disapprove of such antibiotic use. Isn't about time that we started paying attention to health concerns, rather than profit concerns?

Thank you for your consideration.

Sincerely,

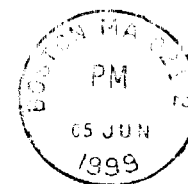

Naomi B. Isler
